The Australian Medical Council (AMC) is an independent national standards body for medical education and training whose purpose is to ensure that standards of education, training and assessment of the medical profession promote and protect the health of the Australian community.

The AMC is seeking to appoint an appropriate person as a Council Member who is or has recently been a medical student enrolled at a medical school accredited by the AMC.

The appointed student member will also have the opportunity to interact with a wide range of experienced members of the medical profession, health consumers and members of the community represented on the Council, and with those involved directly in health services delivery.

The term of appointment will be for two years and the successful candidate will need to commit at least three full days per year to prepare for and attend the June and November meetings of Council, including this year's AGM and site visit being held on 28 & 29 November 2019.

The AMC is committed to ensuring a range of skill sets and diversity in membership, from different geographical locations, to different levels of academic or clinical experience or expertise.

The AMC acknowledges the importance of healthier outcomes for Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander people and Māori and privileging Indigenous voices and encourages applications from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and Māori.
