Are you a Māori experienced in Māori health issues?

Would you like to be involved in the mahi of the Australian Medical Council?

The Australian Medical Council (AMC) is an independent national standards body for medical education and training. Our purpose is to ensure that standards of education, training and assessment of the medical profession promote and protect the health of the Australian community. Our role also extends to accrediting medical schools in Aotearoa, and Australasian Colleges.

The AMC is seeking a Māori experienced in Māori health issues to appoint as a Member of Council.

The term of appointment is for a maximum of four years, commencing at the conclusion of the AMC's Annual General Meeting on 26 November 2021.

Members need to commit at least three full days per year to prepare for and attend the June and November meetings of Council. Members will collaborate with Council Members drawn from the medical profession, medical and health standards bodies, medical education and training, health consumers and community members and also have the opportunity to serve on AMC committees, expert groups and panels covering a range of business areas across the AMC.

The AMC is committed to ensuring a range of skill sets and diversity in membership, from different geographical locations, to different academic, clinical, consumer and community experience or expertise.

The AMC advocates for healthier outcomes for Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander people and Māori and privileging Indigenous voices.

An AMC Selection Panel will review all applications and shortlisted candidates will be invited to participate in an interview.

The AMC is a Company Limited by Guarantee and a registered charity. It is subject to the Corporations Act, Australian Charities and Not-for-Profits Commission Act, and operates in accordance with its Constitution.
